BROCK PEMBERTON—I was in London last winter. One affernoon I was asked to go to one of the performances of the London Stage Society, an organization which gives seedial performances of plays that aren't apt to have a hearing in London, otherwise. They were giving "Six Characters in Search of an Auther." I said I couldn't go, because I had an appoin ment with the curator of the Victoria and Albert Museum to see about bringing over an exhibition of stage design. exhibition of stage design.

Young Boswell—That exhibition was in Ams'erdam last February, but I didn't have a chance to go. I couldn't get away from Bruszels in time. What was it like?

was it like?

BROCK PEMBERTON—There were stage sets from most of the civilized countries. Gordon Craig, of course, and Appia. He anteda'es the leaders of the simplified movement. He deals in masses, using skies and piles of steps and that sort of thing. America was represented by Robert Edmond Jones, Norman Bel-Geddes, Sam Hume, Lew Simonson and Joseph Urban. I've turned over my part of it to "The Theater Ar's Magazine." They're going to bring it to New York, I believe.

A call of "Curtain!" interrupted the conversation, which was resumed after the second act, in which the six characters are put through their parts by the bewildered director.

Mrs. Harding Better; Sits at Holiday Dinner

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30. -Thanksgiving Day was observed at the White House with an even larger measure of thankfulness than usual.

Mrs. Harding joined the President at the dinner table for the first time since she was taken ill late in August. The only guest at the dinner was Attorney General Daugherty.

Mrs. Harding has made excellent progress, it is learned, in the last two weeks, and is growing stronger steadily. Although she was taken to the dining table today in a wheel chair, she is able to walk about her room.

HAVE often been asked this question: "What is the most exciting novel you have ever read?" The answer is not difficult. I have been thrilled by "The Three Musketeers," "Treasure Island," "The Advenword in the first chapter to the last word on the book's last page, it never lags or sags. I will guarantee this story to all convalescents; and as an anæsthe ic for rail-
